1. A large-scale reduction of office personnel and industrial workers is being enforced throughout Yugoslavia, primarily because of the inability of the government to pay the salaries of these people.
2. The General Staff of the Yugoslav Army has begun accepting former Royal Yugoslav Army officers and non-commissioned officers for active duty in the Yugoslav Army. This action has resulted in dissatisfaction among ex-partisan officers in army ranks who fear that they may now be relegated to minor positions. As a result, many partisan officers are reorienting themselves toward the Cominform.
3. Numerous high Party and Government officials in Yugoslavia have introduced and are circulating the word that many changes have been made in Yugoslavia and more are in the offing. The meaning behind this remark is that changes in Yugoslavia's relations with the West currently are being effected and more are due to come.
